ANECDOTE of the JAR

WALLACE STEVENS

I placed a jar in Tennessee,
And round it was, upon a hill.
It made the slovenly wilderness
Surround that hill.

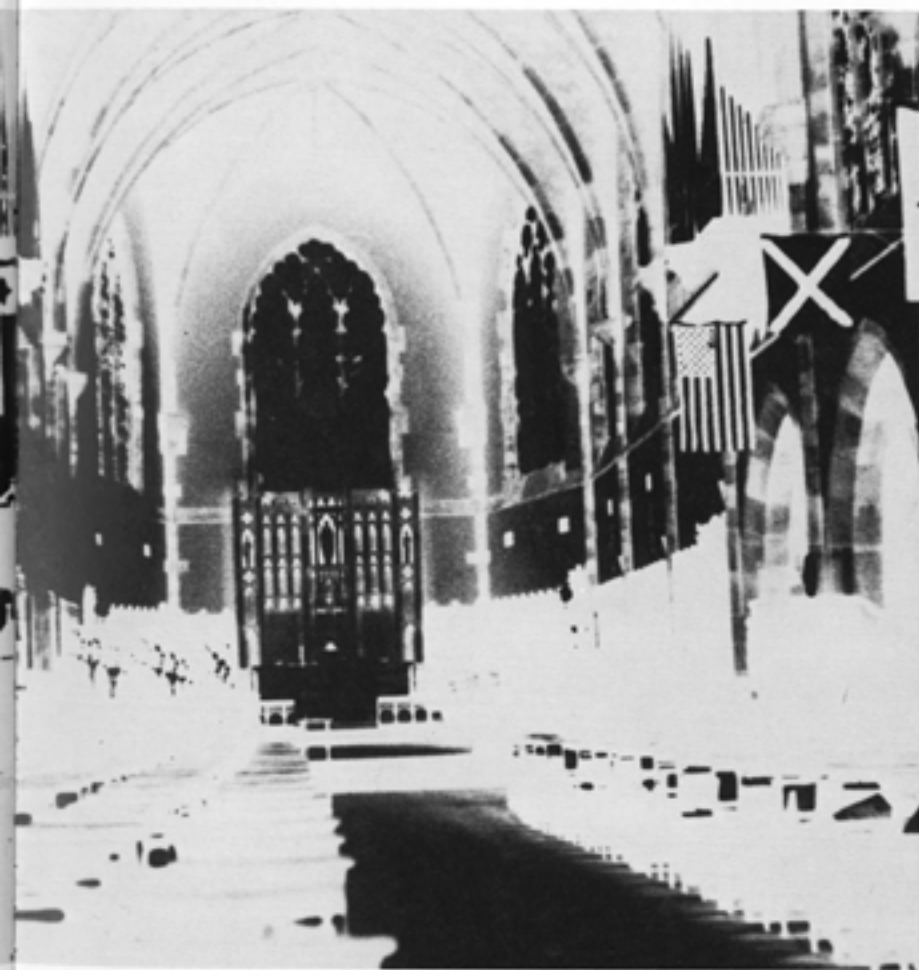

That wilderness rose up to it,
And sprawled around no longer wild.
The jar was round upon the ground
And tall and of a port in air.

It took dominion everywhere.
The jar was gray and bare.
It did not give of bird or bush,
Like nothing else in Tennessee.

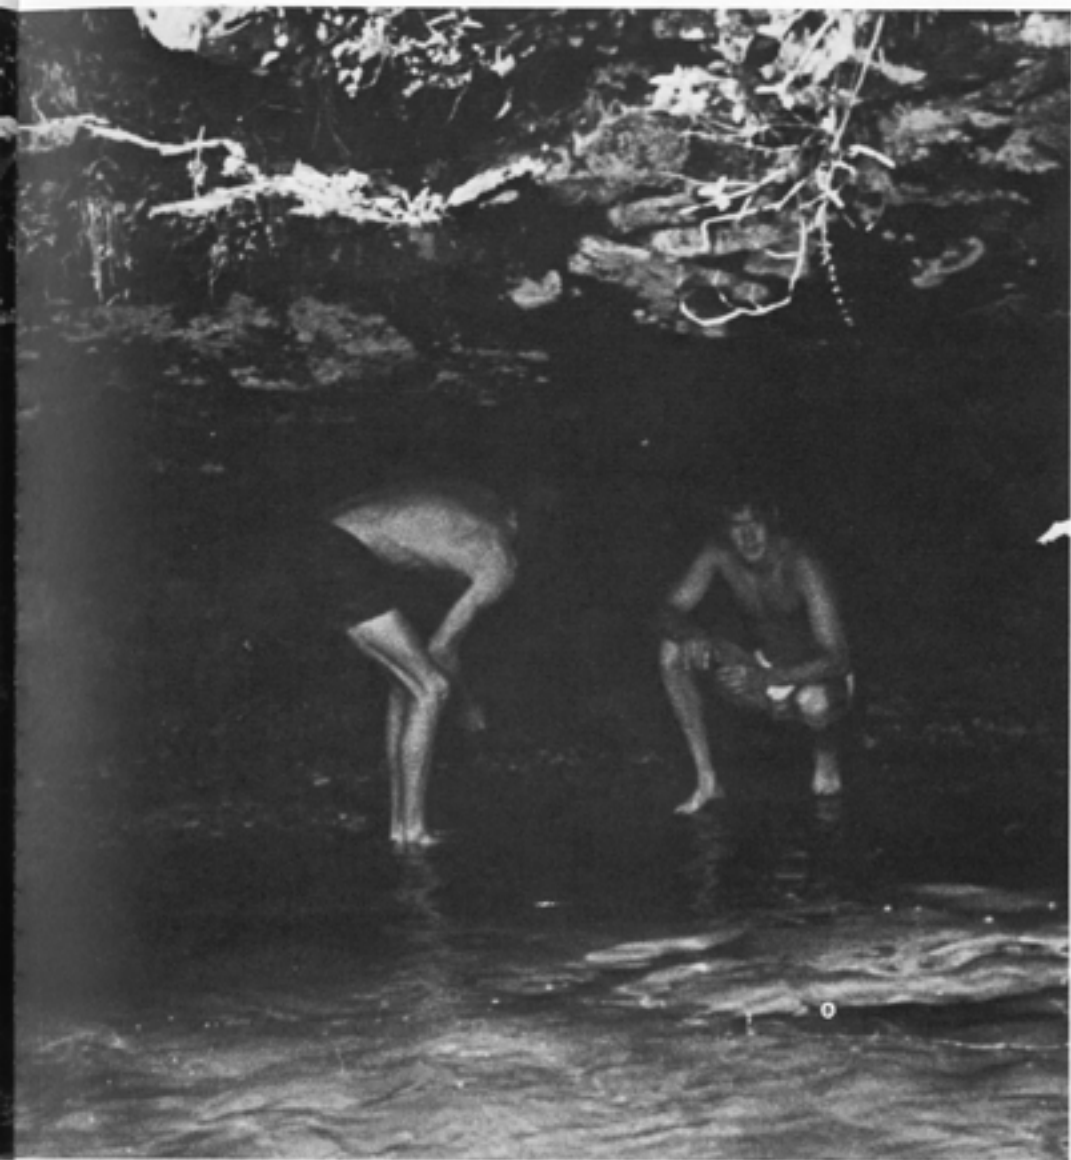

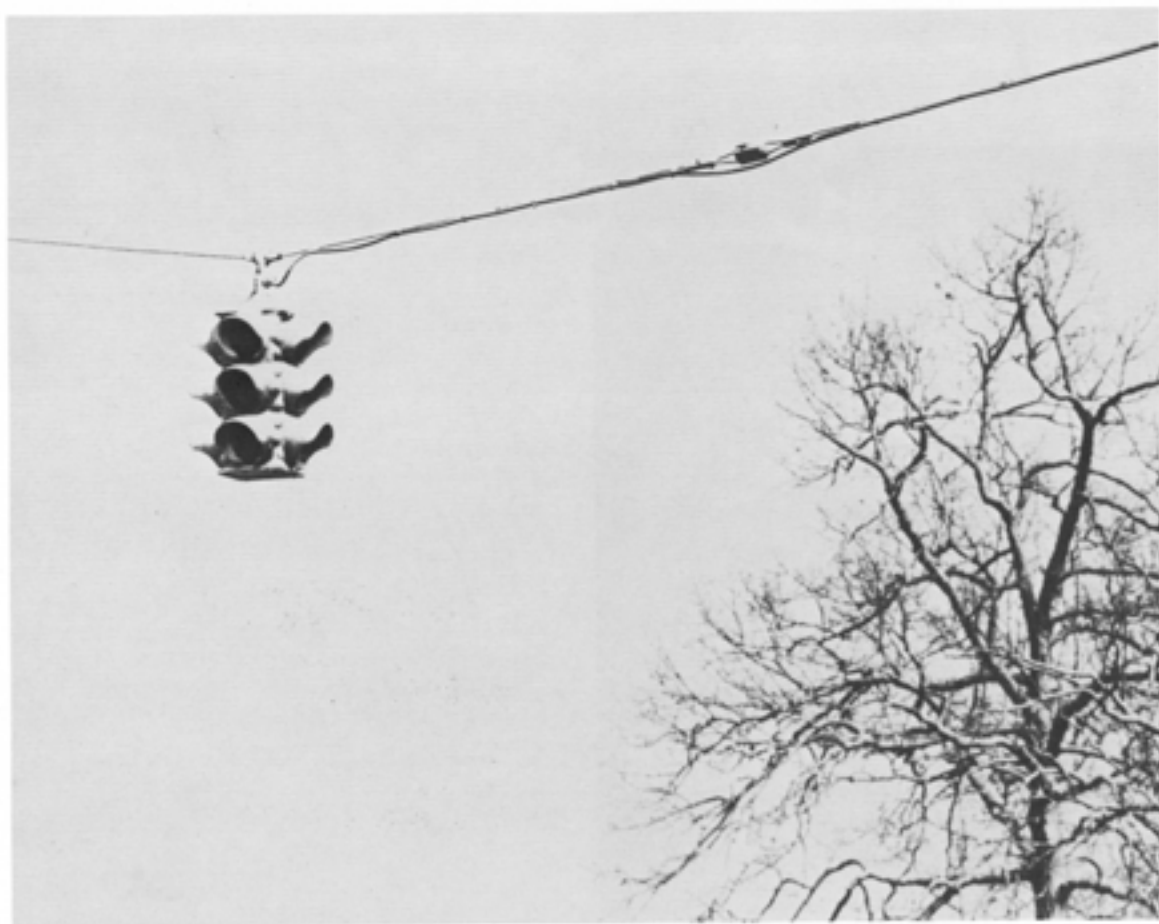

The 1972 CAP and GOWN
is respectfully dedicated to the
MOUNTAIN COMMUNITY

Sewanee has about it a permanence of sandstone and vine unchanged by whatever is moving about it. It is there and will always be there regardless of those who inhabit the surrounding area or congregate in its halls or passageways. It is timeless in the sense that it remains unchanged by progress, for even progress can not change the essence of a place that was there long before its inception.

It is known that with the creation lies the seeds of the destruction or death of all things except those things sheltered in the mind or heart, for they live on long after the physical has perished in time and space. Here then is the immortality, if you will, of a place so patterned to change that it does so each September and so different that it is never really the same to any one person, and yet uniquely itself to all.

It is hard to be objective about a place in which one passes the most formidable years of their life - just as it is hard to view love objectively, for that implies separation of self from that which is inseparable. Sewanee then is perhaps best viewed as a series of impressions, all of which blend together to form a whole, much like a Seurat painting. Viewed up close it is merely a series of dots, but when viewed from afar, it takes on form.

If you are one given to analogies, here in total objectivity you have the essence of Sewanee. Some never step back from the canvas, and for them the view will always be fragmentary. They will leave never knowing the true panorama and significance of each little dot. They will be unable to appreciate the mastery and uniqueness of which they were a part. And for them the experience is wasted. But for those who step back and view the canvas from a distance, there will be the unmistakable pleasure that comes with the discovery of Knowledge, and with Knowledge comes Wisdom. It is this self learned knowledge that will become the center of their being and will thus enable them to view life in its totality and not in part. The University has not taught the crassness of the world beyond, for that is not its function; but it has given what it should have given: a way of understanding. And for those who share in this understanding the experience is a very real one.

If you see it and live with your experience for only a few years, it will be a thing which will always evade the reoccurrence which you will forever be seeking. On the other hand, if you are one of the fortunate who view their experience there as timeless, it will always be for you just beyond the mind's eye. You will feel its winter's cold and relish in its ephemeral springs, and for you will be the joy of the beginning and the acceptance in the end.

A black and white photograph of a bare tree against a cloudy sky. The tree's silhouette is dark and intricate, with many thin, leafless branches reaching upwards and outwards. The sky is filled with soft, textured clouds, creating a dramatic and somewhat somber atmosphere. The overall composition is vertical, with the tree's trunk running down the center-left of the frame.
